COVID-19 Update

Message from Dr. Rich Lloyd, President of Bryan College of Health Sciences:

March 13, 2020
Dear Students,

As we continue to focus on and respond to the needs of our community in response to COVID-19 and as we stay in conversation with our higher education colleagues, we have made the decision to suspend on-campus courses and college related events at the end of today, Friday, March 13. We will transition all face-to-face and hybrid theory courses to online beginning March 30. Information regarding clinical, lab, and simulation will come directly from your program dean by the end of today.

Current online courses will continue as normal; we suggest you work ahead during next week’s transition period.

We will use next week, March 16-20 and Spring Break Week, March 23-27 as a time for the college to implement these transition plans. We have established two dates to review whether or not we will return to on-campus instruction during the remainder of the term. The first review date is April 13 and we will communicate with you on that day.

As of now, all offices, departments, facilities and support services remain open and you are welcome to make use of the facility adhering to all safety precautions in place.

I will be sending you regular updates on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday of each week. These updates are to keep you informed with the most up-to-date information.

Thank you all for your flexibility and support as we review and put plans in place. I have been touched by how many of you, in response to my emails or conversations in the halls, have asked what more you can do to assist the college or Bryan Medical Center in response to this public health emergency.

Rich Lloyd, PhD
President
